

Cultural Experience with a medicine man

Sequoyah, a Cherokee/Choctaw medicine man, built a Konkurra/House of Peace, and a Purification Lodge in the scenic Kootenay area of the Rocky Mountains. There, he and other Native Elders invite their guests to share intercultural and spiritual experiences building bridges between Native traditional cultures and the lifestyle of today's world.

CULTURAL WEEKEND - 4 days/3 nights SPIRIT JOURNEY - 8 days/7 nights

CULTURAL WEEKEND – example program

Day 1: Arrive at the Wilderness Centre by 5:00 p.m. After preliminary introductions with staff, facilitators and First Nations elder, a hot evening meal will be served in the main lodge. After dinner, we will discuss more about the coming intercultural experiences, and then the evening is yours to relax at the Wilderness Centre.

Day 2-3: On these two days we spend our time around the Wilderness Centre, or the surrounding landscape, participating in various inter-cultural sharing experiences with a North American First Nations elder. Possible experiences could include: various nature or medicine walks; nature awareness or inter-cultural sharing activities based on traditional teachings; traditional earth and wilderness skills; and traditional campfire gatherings with camaraderie, stories, and music. All experiences will introduce you to an important nature and community-based way of life. The days evolve out of the relationships that occur in a traditional way, so there is no set schedule, and the experiences themselves end up being different for each person. Therefore, we cannot say how it will all turn out; it always turns out exactly the way it is supposed to, for everyone to powerfully get out of it exactly what they are meant to.

Day 4: After one final breakfast together, we part ways until next time.
